Notable features:

A matched terrace of houses dating late 1870's or early 1880's. Some have round-headed doors, others the tall wooden frame with transom common in the late 1860's and early 1870's. There is filigree work over the windows and in the cornices. These details may have been owner's choice. High basements, good marble steps, excellent brick work. The terrace is remarkably well preserved.

Environmental context:

A dead-end street at Hollins, so is quiet and pleasant. Lithuanian Hall is across-street; street trees are needed.
